Destined to be one of the stars of the English Bar

- Legal 500

Lucy Colter's practice is focused on the core areas of commercial litigation (including offshore work), professional liability claims, and construction.

Lucy is ranked as a leading junior in the Legal 500 for Commercial Litigation, Offshore, Construction and Professional Negligence and in Chambers & Partners for Construction, Professional Negligence and Professional Negligence: Technology and Construction. She is currently nominated for the 2020 Chambers & Partners Construction Junior of the Year award.

Lucy has been described as "Destined to be one of the stars of the English Bar - she is extremely bright, personable and tactically incisive", "perfect with clients and one of the cleverest barristers I have worked with." "She provides consistently excellent service and understands entirely what we and our insured and insurer clients want", "first-rate - someone who works hard under difficult circumstances and is very approachable and normal", "she is excellent, good at the detail, very positive and has a good knowledge of the law", "extremely hard-working, very bright and has an exceptional mastery of the detail of complex matters. She provides invaluable input" and "a good team player who is insightful and responsive."

In 2017, Lucy was identified as one of just twelve "Stars of the Bar" under 10 years' call by Legal Week.

Commercial litigation

Lucy's practice is dominated by large-scale litigation particularly with a Russian/CIS connection. Led by Justin Fenwick QC, she has represented Oleg Deripaska in recent arbitral, High Court and Court of Appeal proceedings against Vladimir Chernukhin.

Professional Liability

Lucy acts in challenging and high-value claims, both for and against professionals. She is presently instructed (led by Ben Hubble QC) by an ultra high-net worth client bringing lost litigation claims worth US$500 million+ against a leading City firm of solicitors in respect of claims arising out of a failed joint venture and the extraction and dissipation of the client's interests and funds worldwide. She was recently instructed (led by Graeme McPherson QC) in a claim against a senior tax barrister instructed as an expert in respect of the demerger of a property empire, involving allegations of conflict and bias.

Construction & Engineering

Offshore

Lucy's practice involves substantial and diverse offshore work in particular in the Channel Islands and Cayman. She is instructed in trust matters and litigation; construction matters concerning offshore arbitration or claims in the Royal Court; contractual disputes. Her commercial litigation practice very frequently involves an offshore element, in particular Cyprus, Cayman and the BVI.

Areas of Expertise

International Arbitration

Lucy has extensive experience of the LCIA rules and an unusual amount of experience of section 67/section 68 challenges under the Arbitration Act, particularly in the Deripaska v Chernukhin litigation (in which she acts for Mr Deripaska, led by Justin Fenwick QC).

Qualifications & Memberships

Lucy is a member of Lincoln's Inn. She was awarded the Lord Brougham, Lord Mansfield and Lord Sheldon scholarships for the CPE, BVC and pupillage respectively.

Lucy is a long-standing contributor to Jackson & Powell on Professional Liability (currently in its 8th edn.).

She is a member of COMBAR, TECBAR and PNBA.

Lucy sits on COMBAR's Equality & Diversity Committee and is a former chair of the Young COMBAR committee.

Education

Lucy read English Language & Literature at Trinity College, Oxford, where she achieved a First Class Degree (coming top of her year in Moderations). She was a Percival Exhibitioner and Scholar at Trinity College, and won the Mrs Claude Beddington and the Violet Vaughan Morgan university prizes. She obtained a distinction in the law conversion (CPE), and took a year out to travel in Russia, China, Hong Kong and South East Asia, before the Bar Vocational Course.
