Iona Branford studied Law at Girton College, Cambridge, achieving a first class every year, and winning several university and college prizes.

While at Cambridge, she was involved in pro bono research projects for the Inter-American Court of Human Rights and the Oxbridge Human Development Research Group. Iona subsequently studied the BCL at Lincoln College, Oxford, and the bar course at the Inns of Court College of Advocacy. She then went on to study an LL.M at Peking University, achieving the highest marks in her year in several subjects. Her work has been published in The Law Quarterly Review, Lloyd's Maritime and Commercial Law Quarterly, and The Journal of Business Law.

In her spare time, Iona enjoys playing violin and piano.
